Trekkie love

It's officially Valentine's Day, which means everyone and their single brother is hyperdepressed about the hand party that's been keeping 'em warm at night. Matchmaking entrepreneurs, meanwhile, see dolla-dolla bills in all those crumbled tissues and can't wait to capitalize on our sad-sap schmuckdom. Today sees the launch of Till Death Do Us Part, a free online dating service for the terminally ill; You and Me, a Facebooky site that allows registered users to text other users while on dates (e.g., "WTF, this dude blows. Where you at, Shorty?"); and Divorce Dating, which could've totally saved Michael Douglas and Kathleen Turner's unfortunate dog from becoming pâté in The War of the Roses.

Add this to the scores of sites that already cater to vegetarians, Ivy Leaguers, May-December romancers, goths, farmers, bikers, Trekkies, herpes hotties and, uh, people we suspect really like Lisa Frank binders, and it's like there's no such thing as whole-package dating anymore. Don't get us wrong: We're all about trolling for love in really niche places, but at what point are your suitors into you or just into your disease/alimony stories/Boca Burger addiction? Once you've watched Star Trek in its entirety (twice), will there be anything left to talk about? More importantly, how come no one has launched a TGIF dating site? Alas, our love shall remain unconsummated.
